Elections in Ireland on 17 February 1987

In accordance with normal practice for officials of the European Communities when an election is held in their country of origin, special leave and travelling time may be granted to officials and agents of the Commission qualified to vote in person.

Travelling time for elections is calculated in working days, which may be used before, after or partly before and the rest after election day. The 17 february falls on a working day and is not counted as part of the travelling time.

Travelling time is calculated as follows :

distance between place of work
and place of election

between 50 and 250 kms	0,5 day + voting day
251 and 600 kms	1,0 day + voting day
601 and 900 kms	1,5 days + voting day
901 and 1400 kms	2,0 days + voting day
1401 and 2000 kms	2,5 days + votingday
over 2000 kms	3,0 days + votingday

Travelling time and special leave shall be granted only on production of appropriate travel documents and documentary evidence of having voted.

Officials and other servants of Ireland who are unable to obtain this documents are requested to submit their ticket of travel from the place of work to the place of voting, accompanied by a formal statement by the person concerned, certifying that he has voted.

Leave office of the Commission in Brussels (tel. 52761) - TRI 0/200 - and the Personnel Division in Luxembourg shall be responsible for all matters concerning implementation of these provisions.
